The Department of History has organized a state level webinar on Gender, Epidemics and Health Care on 7th August, 2020. Prof. Sujata Mukherjee, Professor, Department of History and Former Dean of Arts, Rabindra Bharati University.

In the light of the covid 19, history of epidemics played an important role. It goes without saying that outbreak and prevalence of epidemics and endemic disease, and availability of medical relief and public health measures in general, affected levels of sickness and mortality to varying degree of both male and female population during the colonial period. She through some lights on the different aspects of sickness and mortality in the pre famine as well as in the famine period in Bengal and seeks to analyzed how they were tackled. Students and participants from other colleges were mesmerized by her speech and they raised various questions. It was a gala success.
